Mitigating Factors for pricing differences:

Supply & Demand, there is a low supply with a high demand. Supply chain issues (parts & labor) along with inflation. Raw material costs are the leading cause of inflation in automotive industry. Industry wide Chip shortages. Suppliers prepared pricing in September/October 2022 when there was still much uncertainty in the market. We began price negotiations in January 2023 and were able to obtain price decreases across the board. Final pricing was compared against the Independent Cost Estimate in which pricing was brought to current market value. There were still many differences so we requested pricing results from a recently executed contract with the State of Georgie. We found that in many cases, our pricing was lower than their current contract. There were some instances where our pricing was still higher and upon further review, we determined that our pricing was based on our base bus including additional items such as Fire Suppression Sytems, Event Data Recorders and more expansive interlock systems. Based on our analysis, we have determined that given the various factors analyzed, negotiated price is fair and reasonable and we should move forward with contract execution.

Based on the above analysis and statements, pricing has been determined to be fair and reasonable.
